Mrs. Laselle Dies After a Plunge from a Window.

For Years She Had Been Unable to Walk Without Aid.

Reighbors Say They Heard Sho and Breaking Glass.

Mrs. Sarah Laselle, an invalid, fiftyseven years old, of 72 Downing street, died at St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, early this morning, under circumstances which her neighbors think are sufficient to warrant a thorough investigation by Several persons who live in the neighberhood say now that just before she fell they heard several pistol shots, followed by a series of sounds that re-sembled the breaking of window glass. This, they say, brought many persons to the rear windows of their houses.

Mrs. Laselle was suffering from a spinal disease which paralized her body from the waist down and rendered it impossible for her to stand or walk occupied the third-story back room in Mrs. John G. Dillon's house, where she has been boarding with her son since Amn. Dillon, as has always been her custom, put Mrs. Lanelle to bed last might and left her. She says she cannot understand how the invalid could leave her bed, as she has always been helpless. She denies all knowledge of the pistol shots or broken glass.

Among the neighbors who are positive they heard the pistol shots are A. W. Gilbert, who lives at 64 Downing street; E. J. Fitzbugh, the organist of the Greene Avenue Cathedral, who lives at No. 58.

of Having Shot Him.

Three men have been arrested by the Madison street station police for the shooting of Michael Walsh early yesterday morning at 179 Monroe street. Edward Daily, of 87 Monroe street, and William McCarthy, who are held as witnesses, are believed by the police to be innocent of complicity in the crime. Edward Carey, of 48 Pike street, is regarded with suspicion, and will be held to await developments.

MRS. LANGTRY'S NEW PLAYS

She Will Produce Them in Her Coming American Tour.

Stare Horses in Demand-Other News and Gossip of the Drama.

"Americans ought to remember one pleasant thing in Mrs. Langtry's favor," said Joseph Reynolds, the actress's has-been-before and going-to-be-again manager. "It is this: All the money she made in this country-and she made a good deai-is still here, in investments. She didn't cart it away with her to Engiand. No, sir; she left it to mature on its native soil. That's worth remembering. Don't you think so? Why, even her private car, that cost thousands of dollars, is just out-side of Boston, standing idle. Modjeska used it last season, and it is still to the good. I got a letter from Mrs. Langtry vesterday." continued Mr.

That kick of Boston's to have the Langtry yesterday," continued Mr. Reynolds, "and she sent me a list of toire. She will have two brand-new toire. She will have two brand-new plays; one a costume comedy called 'Dolores;' then she will do 'Esther Sandraz,' a dramatization of 'La Femme de Feu;' 'Agatha Tilden,' The Fringe of Society,' and 'A Wife's Peril.' Mrs. Langtry, when she wrote to me, was just about to start for Paris, on the all-important mission of costume-purchasing, and I think that you'll say when you see her that she doesn't look purchasing, and I think that you'll say when you see her that she doesn't look a day order than when she was here last.' Mrs. Langtry, by-the-bye, was anxious at first to arrive here, a la Duse, unnoticed and uninterviewed, but she has waived the point, and will undoubtedly submit to the inevitable. Ten to one, she'll say 'you don't know how delighted I am to get back to dear, dear America."

This is a great week for stage horses, and if only the dramatic agents had the securing of them they would be reaping a fine harvest. The second pretty girl looked as if she wanted to cry. She said, with tremulous voice: "Why, Nettle, what do you think? The fare's a dollar."

"A what?" gasped Nettle.
"A dollar, and she told us it was only 50 cents, and I haven't got enough to get the tickets, and, oh dear, I don't know what we will do."

She sank down beside Nettle, and the two looked at the tiled floor with very solemn faces. Presently Nettle looked up and said: "I'll take a walk around the room. Perhaps there is somebody here I know." She made the tour of the room and came back with her face gloomier than before. "Nobody here I ever saw before," she said, brokenly. The other girl sprang to her feet. "I'm going to tell the ticket man just how it is," she said. "Perhaps he will take what we've got and let us send him the rest." She came back with tears in her eyes. "He won't," she said, saidly.

The man who was waiting for his wife heard all of this. His heart was touched. So he leaned over and said: "I beg your pardon, but, ladies, I—that is—will you allow me to help you in your hour of trouble?"

The pretty young girls started and looked at the man with frightened airs. The man whatened to reassure them that his intentions were honorable, and, after many protests and arranging for repayment and exchange of names, and all that, he gave the pretty girls $1.15, and they thanked him prettily and went to get their train.

It so happened that the man's wife did not come on that train, and he went down to another train in the evening. While he was One of the brightest newspaper men in he country, while here a short time ago, old the following story on himself,
